

Charity Ambassador

Location: Aberdeen/Aberdeenshire

Hours: No set hours – as often/much as you can give

Reports to: Volunteer Coordinator

Charity ambassadors help to promote awareness of our charity, in order to help us gain support from stakeholders and raise funds.

The role of an ambassador can take many forms; from networking on our behalf, to attending events to tell people about us, to setting up connections for us. Perhaps you have insight into how local authorities operate or can help us build new collaborations and partnerships?

This role can be bespoke to you and your background. You can guide us on how you would like to contribute so you can get involved in a way you are comfortable with.

Fly the flag for SensationALL!:

- Be our public-facing representative directing people towards us.
- Promote and attend our fundraising events to help raise much needed funds.
- Share our messages on social platforms and help us reach new audiences.
- Network for us - we are a small team and you could help by being our proxy; this could be in corporate networks, community groups or schools.

What will you get out of being an ambassador?

- Fulfilment of making a positive difference
- Experience working within third sector
- Raising awareness of neurodivergence and inclusivity
- Recognition as an ambassador on our website

What can you expect from us?

- A dedicated SensationALL contact to support you in your role
- Access to our internal training at no cost
- To cover any expenses you incur while carrying out your role e.g. travel costs.

What makes a good ambassador?

- Personable and approachable
- Enthusiastic about making a positive difference for the neurodivergent community
- Confident in networking and/or public speaking
